Document 2: WO 95/31451 A1 (SmithKline Beecham Corp.), 23 November 1995 & US 5559137 A & JP 10-500413 A & EP 871622 A1 & US 5998425 A & US 6306883 B1

Inventive step

The inventions set forth in claims 1-36 do not involve an inventive step in the light of documents 1 and 2.

Document 1 discloses, as compounds having a p38 MAP kinase inhibiting action, pyrazole derivatives having a substituted or unsubstituted phenyl group on position 3 of the pyrazole, a pyrazyl group on position 4 and an optionally substituted amine bound to position 5. It further discloses such pyrazole derivatives wherein there is a hydrogen atom, a substituted or unsubstituted lower alkyl group or a substituted or unsubstituted aryl group bound to one of the nitrogen atoms forming the pyrazole ring. These pyrazole derivatives differ from the compounds described in claims 1-33 in that in the compounds described in claims 1-33 it is specified that the nitrogen atom bound to a specified group is in position 1 in the pyrazole ring, and in that there are restrictions as to the specified group. However, since the position of the bonding nitrogen atom is not specified in document 1, the disclosure therein should naturally be considered to include the case where the bond is on the nitrogen atom in position 1; moreover, in document 2 it is indicated that in similar compounds the bond is on the nitrogen atom in position 1. Therefore, no particular difficulty is discovered in specifying position 1 as the position of the bond to the nitrogen atom in a compound disclosed in document 1. Similarly, as regards the groups which can be bound to the nitrogen atom, in addition to the relevant disclosure in document 1 referred to above, document 2 indicates the use of a heteroaryl group as the group bound to the nitrogen atom on position 1. Therefore, a person skilled in the art could easily use specified groups selected from among heteroaryl groups in compounds having the same structure described in claims 1-33; and there is no discernable surprising effect as a result of so doing.
